A Moment for Reflection

Greetings Church Family and Friends,

As we turn the page to the month of June it brings to mind Father's Day and the most popular month for weddings. As you have probably come to know, I love all kinds of poems. I decided to look and see if I could find some humorous poems concerning fathers and weddings. The following is a cute poem on marriage by the beloved children's author Shel Silverstein:

“The Romance” by Shel Silverstein

*Said the pelican to the elephant,
“I think we should marry, I do.*

*’Cause there’s no name that rhymes with me,
And no one else rhymes with you.”*

*Said the elephant to the pelican,
“There’s sense to what you’ve said,
For rhyming’s as good a reason as any
For any two to wed.”*

*And so the elephant wed the pelican,
And they dined upon lemons and limes,
And now they have a baby pelican,
And everybody rhymes.*

On the next page is a poem by one of my favorite poets, Edgar Albert Guest about Father. Mr. Guest wrote poetry that was so down to earth and oftentimes hearkens to a slower, more relaxed time, but one can also relate this particular poem to today.

May all the couples getting married this month and any time, and all loving Fathers be blessed richly by the Lord! And may all of you enjoy the blessings of the bright warmer days of June!
Stephanie
